MIAMI UNDER NFL SCRUTINY AMID ABUSE ALLEGATIONS

Reuters

MIAMI Miami Dolphins head coach Joe Philbin said Monday that he welcomes the NFI's review of the team's workplace following the ban of starting lineman Richie Incognito for conduct detrimental to the team.

The Dolphins suspended Incognito on Sunday night, hours after the team said it was looking into bullying and abuse allegations made by Miami offensive tackle Jonathan Martin.

"The NFL is going to conduct a review of the workplace," Philbin told a news conference at the Dolphins' training facility. "It's going to be comprehensive, it's going to be objective.

"As an organization we are going to give our full and complete cooperation with the NFL."

Martin, who was a second-round draft choice in 2012 out of Stanford, left the team last week on a leave of absence. The 23-year-old had started every game of his rookie season and seven games this year.

Philbin said Martin did not inform him of problems with his teammates at the time, but representatives of his notified him later about repeated harassment and that after gathering more information the decision was made to suspend Incognito.

Neither the Dolphins nor Philbin would elaborate on the allegations against Incognito.

On Twitter, Incognito denied wrongdoing and demanded his name be cleared.

The incident shines a light on rookie hazing that has long been a widespread practice in the league, though not generally known to have been taken to extremes.

ESPN reported Sunday that Incognito convinced Martin to contribute $15,000 to help finance a trip to Las Vegas, even though Martin did not go on the trip.

Other instances of intimidation and racial epithets were captured on voicemails and texts, according to media reports.

"As the head coach of the Miami Dolphins I'm in charge of the workplace atmosphere," Philbin said, adding that his aim has been "to help our players and our organization reach their full potential.

"Any type of conduct or behavior that detracts from that objective is not acceptable. It's not tolerated."

What to do with your Chicago Card

Farewell, Chicago Cards.

For nearly a decade, those blue and vellow plastic squares have been the way thousands of CTA riders have paid their fares. They were not always reliablesome were known to fall apart after normal wear and tear-but you didn't have to take them out of your wallet to tap, as you have to do now with Ventra.

And soon, they will be extinct. Ventra, the CTA's new fare payment system, is replacing Chicago Cards on Nov. 15.

But what to do with your defunct Chicago Card?

Well, unlike the disposable magnetic stripe cards, you can't recycle Chicago Cards. The city says the cards' radio frequency-identification chip-which stores rider information-"causes a contamination with the rest of the recycling materials," spokeswoman Molly Poppy said.

Poppy said she reached out to Earthworks, a Cleveland-based plastic card recycling company, which won't take them either because of lake Gunst's Halloween costume proved so offensive to some people that he was yelled at, cussed out and hit. Repeatedly,

If you don't want to save the card or throw it away, consider donating it to Columbia art student Sid Yiddish, a former "America's Got Talent" contestant. Yiddish is enrolled in a class in which he makes guitar picks out of old gift cards and debit cards.

All for wearing a blown-up copy of a Ventra card, the new fare collection system for the CTA.

"Everyone already hates the Ventra card," the 26-year-old from Chinatown said. "I didn't have to do any twists on it for it to be a rude thing to wear for Halloween."

The CTA has increased customer service campaigns since the launch of the new system spurred customer complaints about technical difficulties and glitches.

Gunst said he hit four parties over the course of Halloween week wearing a box with a near exact replica of his Ventra card he made in Photoshop. He barely did any walking around outside of parties, but when he did, things weren't pleasant.

"All I had to do was walk around a short corner, and in that span of time, there were all these '[Bleep] you? and 'I hate you'" comments, he said. "When I walked into a bar, the bartender stopped to look at me. I said, 'I was told I could use this for everyday purchases."

Gunst said people stopped to ask him questions about activating their Ventra cards and to tell horror stories about not receiving their cards or getting several in the mail. As the parties wore on, things even got physical.

"People would hit me a lot," he said. "It was mostly as a joke, but I eventually had to remind them, 'Hey, my body is under here, it really hurts."

As for Gunst's own experience, he said he's probably more confused about Ventra than anybody. He said he hasn't gotten his card in the mail and is currently using a temporary card issued from machines at CTA stations. MSWASKO@TRIBUNE.COM I @SWASKO

Amazing Technology Relieves Serious Back Pain!

Sciatica, Bulging Discs, And Leg Pain ONGE AND FOR ALLE

Do You Have Any of the Following?

- Sharp pains in the back of the leg
- Lower Back Pain
- Herniated/bulging discs
- Numbness in your arms or legs
- Shooting hip or thigh pain
- Muscle spasm, sprains
 & strains

Having back and leg pain can feel like a crippling condition.

You might not be able to play golf, work, or even sit in the car for a 30-minute drive. It's almost impossible for anyone around you to understand how you feel. You can't remember the last time you even had a restful night's sleep.

If you've suffered from any of these annoying conditions, you may have "Sciatica".

Sciatica is a compression of the sciatic nerve, usually by an L4 or L5 disc herniations. As you know, sciatica can be a very painful problem, even crippling at times.

Nothing's worse than feeling great mentally, but physically feeling held back from life because your back or sciatica hurts and the pain just won't go away!

Fortunately, if you are suffering from any of these problems, they may be relieved or eliminated by non-surgical spinal decompression combined with cold laser therapy.

"What's The Chance This Will Work For Me?"

A medical study found patients went from moderately painful to almost no pain with decompression treatments. Those that took pain pills improved less than 5%. – Am Society of Anesthesiologist, 2006 Chicago, IL

Another study presented at the American Academy of Pain Management in 2007 showed...

"Patients reported a mean 88.9% improvement in back pain and better function...No patient required any invasive therapies (e.g. epidural injections, surgery)."

These are just two studies out of a dozen done in the last few years, all showing promising results.

Finally, You Have An Option Other Than Drugs or Surgery

New research in a treatment called low level laser therapy, or cold laser, is having a profound effect on patients suffering with pain. Unlike the cutting type of laser seen in movies and used in medical procedures, cold laser penetrates the surface of the skin with no heating effect or damage.

Cold laser therapy has been tested for 40 years, had over 2000 papers published on it, and been shown to aid in damaged tissue regeneration, decrease inflammation, relieve pain and boost the immune system. This means that there is a good chance cold laser therapy could be your pain solution, allowing you to live a more active lifestyle.

Here's the point of all these studies... spinal decompression combined with cold laser therapy has a high success rate with helping disc herniations, sciatica, and back pain.

This means in just a matter of weeks you could be back on the golf course, enjoying your love life, or traveling again.

The Single Most Important Solution To Your Sciatica and Back Pain

It's time for you to find out if spinal decompression combined with cold laser therapy will be your sciatic pain solution. For 10 days only, $35 will get you all the services I normally charge new patients $250 for!

What does this offer include? Everything. Here's what

- An in-depth consultation about your health and well-being where I will listen...really listen...to the details of your case.
- A complete neuromuscular examination.
- A full set of specialized x-rays to determine if a spinal problem is contributing to your pain or symptoms.
- A thorough analysis of your exam and x-ray findings so we can start mapping out your plan to being pain free.
- You'll get to see everything first hand and find out if this amazing treatment will be your pain solution, like it has been for so many other patients.

I'll answer all of your most probing question about our pain free sciatica and back pain evaluation and what it can do for you.

And the best part about it is...

No Dangerous Drugs, No Invasive Procedures, And No Painful Exercises

Spinal decompression treatments combined with cold laser therapy are very gentle. In fact, I even catch a few patients sleeping during sessions every once and awhile.

"But I feel fine – as long as I take my pain pills."

There's a time to use pain medications, BUT not before seeking a natural way to correct the CAUSE of the problem!

Spinal decompression just may be the answer that you've been looking for. Ask yourself ... after taking all these pain medications and playing the 'wait and see game', maybe for years...are you any better off?

Call and tell the receptionist you'd like to come in for the Special Decompression & Cold Laser Evaluation before November 18, 2013.

We can get started with your consultation, exam and x-rays as soon as there's an opening in the schedule. Our office is called Chicago Chiropractic & Wellness and you can find us at 850 S. Wabash Ave., Ste. 290, located in Downtown Chicago.

I look forward to helping you get rid of your pain so you can start living a healthier, more joyful life.

Sincerely, Paul Ruzila, D.C.

Here's What Our Patients Say...

"Before treatment on the Spinal Decompression Table, I could not put very much weight on my left leg. I could not walk or stand for long periods of time and had tremendous pain in my lower back and down left leg. Since having treatments the pain is gone! I can walk and put weight on my left leg. Would highly recommend and have told friends about my results."

POLICE STOPS RAISE QUESTIONS OF LEGALITY, ALIENATION

Chicago Tribune

Under pressure from police Superintendent Garry McCarthy to reduce violence, Chicago police are increasingly writing up "contact cards"-the form they fill out when making street stops-raising concerns of civil libertarians that the number of unconstitutional stop-and-frisks are also on the rise.

Through the first 10 months of the year, officers had filled out more than 600,000 contact cards, already exceeding last year's total of 516,500 and far outpacing the 379,000 written in 2011, when McCarthy took office, department records show.

Contact cards go back decades as a tool for Chicago police. If officers stop a person on the street but don't make an arrest, they are required to jot down the age, address, race, time and location, and reason for the stop. The contact cards can be helpful to police in keeping track of gangbangers and solving crimes.

McCarthy, the product of a New York City Police Department that relied heavily on stop-and-frisk tactics that a federal judge recently found unconstitutional, has been riding commanders of Chicago's 22 police districts for months to increase street stops by cops, according to numerous police sources.

There is no quota on how many contact cards must be filled out by individual officers each workday, according to the sources, but if too few have been written in a district, commanders risk incurring McCarthy's wrath in front of peers at weekly meetings on Comp-

Stat, the department's data-driven strategy that uses crime statistics and street intelligence to hold police brass accountable for the neighborhoods they oversee.

*Everything will improve if we just get out of the cars and put our hands on people," McCarthy said last January as he peppered a deputy chief, a rank above district commander, with questions about a steady jump in shootings on the South Side, according to transcript of a CompStat meeting, "Make sure your officers are doing this, making out contact cards, and make sure we are stopping the right people at the right times and the right places. This will prevent more crime."

McCarthy's spokesman, Adam Collins, credited the sharp increase in the number of contact cards to the department's renewed commitment to community policing, saying officers more and more are getting out of their squad cars and interacting with the public in positive ways. As part of that effort, officers have been undergoing mandatory training over the past two years to improve their contacts with the public, including giving them a better understanding of what it's like from the public's perspective to be stopped by an officer, Collins said.

Officers interviewed by the Tribune said they write enough contact cards to satisfy their bosses. One tactical officer who works on the North Side said he tries to fill out three or four during an 81/2-hour shift. Among those who might catch his eye are people, particularly youths, hanging out on known drug corners, walking late at night through a private parking lot or looking into a car window.

"If you're out there, there's always people to stop," the veteran officer said.

Officers are not required to fill out contact cards if they have what the department calls a "citizen encounter"-described as "volun-

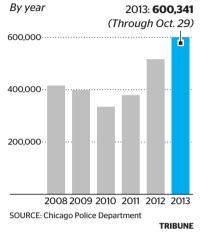

Sharp increase

When Chicago police make a street stop that doesn't end in an arrest, they must fill out a contact card that lists the person's age, address, race, time and location and the reason for the stop. A sharp increase in the number of contact cards since Garry McCarthy became superintendent in 2011 is raising concerns among civil libertarians that improper stopand-frisks are on the rise.

CONTACT CARDS FILLED OUT BY CHICAGO POLICE and the reason for the stop, the information includes clothing, physical description, tattoos and associates. Information from the cards is removed from the database after a year, according to the general order.

But the department said it doesn't keep track of how many of the hundreds of thousands of contact cards are filled out for citizen encounters as opposed to investigatory street stops, making accountability impossible, critics say.

But even as the department says it has shifted its focus to community policing, some crime experts and civil libertarians are troubled by the implications of the growing use of contact cards.

Craig Futterman, a University of Chicago law professor, said McCarthy's call for more contact carding puts officers at risk of making more illegal stops and threatens to undermine the department's efforts to improve trust, particularly with the African-American community.

"Police officers are getting lots of pressure. More and more stops. More and more searches. More and more frisks," said Futterman, who specializes in police misconduct issues. "And the people on the other end of that ... who live in the very communities that are most besieged by crime, most besieged by violence and who the police officers need as effective sources of information ... are alienating and pushing away from the police."

tary" interactions with those they don't deem suspicious. But officers must complete a contact card whenever they make what's known as an "investigatory street stop" but don't end up making an arrest. Officers are authorized to make those stops if they have "reasonable suspicion" that the citizen is doing something illegal, according to the department's general order on contact cards. Officers also can fill out contact cards on motorists stopped for traffic violations.

Most times officers enter the personal information directly into computers in their squad car or station house, but paper cards still can be used. All the information, though, ends up in the department's computerized database. In addition to personal identifiers

Park debts revealed

M-Rahm still paying off Millennium Park loans taken out by Daley

Chicago Tribune

Former Mayor Richard M. Daley borrowed nearly $30 million to cover the costs of running Millennium Park, loans that started the year after one of his signature achievements opened, late and over budget, and ended after he left office.

As a result, taxpayers so far have been saddled with $3.5 million in interest costs to keep open the 24-acre showpiece that features gardens, an outdoor pavilion and the Cloud Gate sculpture commonly called the Bean.

It was an unusual way to pay for day-to-day expenses, akin to a struggling family using a line of credit to pay for groceries. And it's a small amount compared with the billions of dollars in bond money Daley spent in a similar fashion as detailed in a Tribune investigation published Sunday. But the Millennium

DALEY SAYS ...

Asked about the Millennium Park loans Monday, a spokeswoman for the former mayor referred to a statement from Daley issued in response to the Sunday story. Daley said he tried "to address the immediate needs of the city and its residents while anticipating the needs of the future. ... As a result. Chicago now has worldclass stature, the foundation on which new opportunities and success are built."

Park loans stand as another sign of how the city has lived beyond its means.

The former mayor's maneuvers to balance the budget near the end of his tenure, including spending most of $1.15 billion the city collected from a long-term lease of the city's parking meters, have been well-documented. But the loans to keep Millennium Park operating weren't publicly disclosed until last week during hearings on Mayor Emanuel's 2014 city budget proposal.

Ald. John Arena (45th) asked about a new line item buried in the spending plan for the Department of Cultural Affairs and Special Events. Michelle Boone, the agency's commissioner, noted that the city was accelerating the park's debt payments next year because the department was doing well financially.

Later, the Emanuel administration told the Tribune that from 2005 to 2011, Daley borrowed $29.5 million to run the major downtown attraction. The borrowing stopped under the new mayor, a spokeswoman said. But Emanuel not only must find $6.1 million to keep the park open next year, he has to pay off the operating tab racked up under his predecessor. To that end, Emanuel wants to pay off $5.5 million of the debt next year, in part by using nearly $3.6 million in hotel tax revenue.

The city expects to continue paying at least $2 million a year in 2015 and beyond until the debt is paid off, said Kelley Quinn, a city Budget Department spokeswoman.

Supreme Court declines to review abortion case

WASHINGTON The Supreme Court on Monday left intact a state court decision invalidating an Oklahoma law that effectively banned the so-called abortion pill RU-486, with the justices deciding to sidestep a potentially contentious case.

The high court had been waiting for the Oklahoma Supreme Court to clarify a December 2012 ruling that had voided the law before deciding on whether to rule on the case. Last week, the state court issued a new opinion explaining its reasoning in more detail.

The high court's latest action means the Oklahoma Supreme Court ruling is final. The state court said the effect of the law would have been a ban on all abortions by medications, and as a result "restricts the longrespected medical discretion of physicians^o who decide that method is safer for some patients than surgical abortion.

That ruling invalidated a state law it said had the effect of banning abortion-inducing drugs altogether.

The group Center for Reproductive Rights, which had challenged the law, said the Supreme Court's action means that women in Oklahoma will now have access to druginduced abortions in addition to non-surgical treatment of ectopic pregnancies, in which an embryo implants outside the uterus.

"The Supreme Court has let stand a strong decision by the Oklahoma Supreme Court that recognized this law for what it is: an outright ban on a safe method of ending a pregnancy in its earliest stages, and an unconstitutional attack on women's health and rights," the group's president, Nancy Northup, said in a statement.

By declining on Monday to hear the case, the high court signaled that while it will not shy away from reviewing abortion regulations in some instances, it has no appetite to revisit earlier contentious decisions on the right to abortion in general terms.

The Oklahoma court said in its first ruling on the law that the measure violated a 1992 U.S. Supreme Court ruling that set the standard for how courts should weigh abortion

Will Republicans support new gay rights bill?

WASHINGTON House of Representatives Speaker John Boehner on Monday opposed a bill to ban workplace discrimination based on sexual orientation and gender identity, dimming the chances of the White House-backed measure becoming law.

"The speaker believes this legislation will increase frivolous litigation and cost American jobs, especially small business jobs," Boehner's spokesman, Michael Steel, said in a statement.

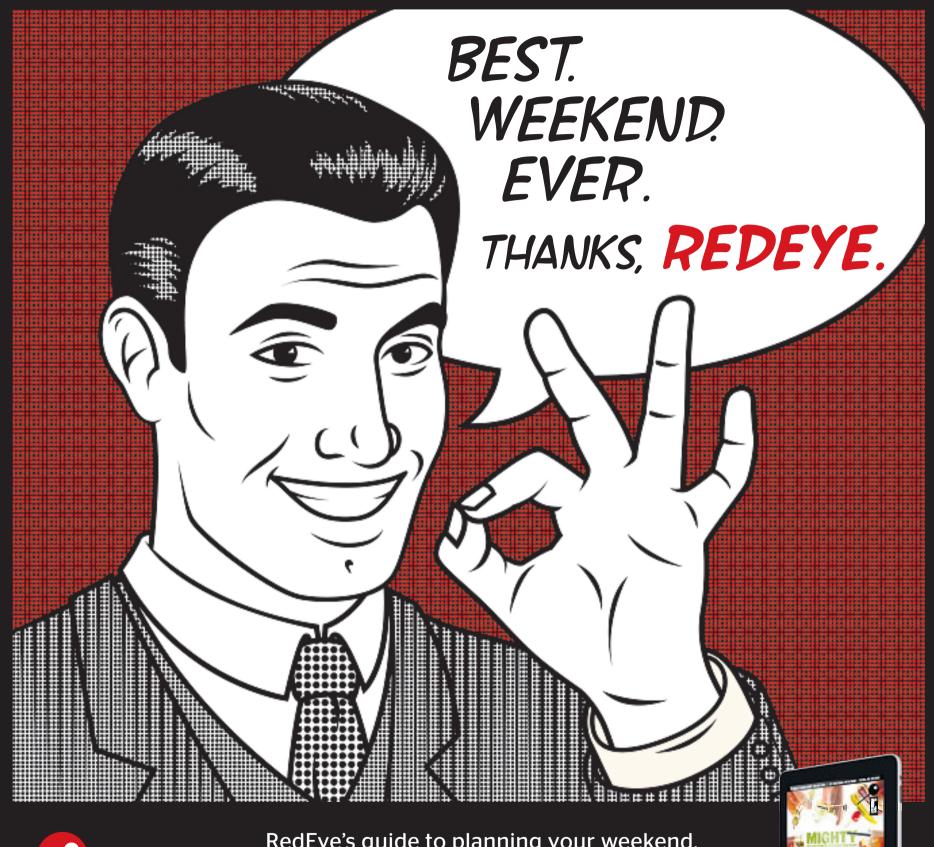

Steel issued the statement at about the same time that the bill's backers in the Senate appeared to have gathered enough support to clear a Republican procedural roadblock.

Dean Heller of Nevada became the fifth Senate Republican to announce support for the bill. "This legislation raises the federal standards to match what we have come to expect in Nevada, which is that discrimination must not be tolerated under any circumstance," Heller said.

The bill has become the latest example of the ideological struggle within the Republican party over gay rights. While an increasing number of Republicans are showing more flexibility over gay rights, conservative groups are threatening to mount challenges against those Republicans who support such measures.

If you watched Monday's Bears-Packers game simply to pass the time before the release of "Call of Duty: Ghosts" on Tuesday, that's understandable.

You could say the banged-up Bears, like the protagonists in "Ghosts," represent "a crippled nation fighting not for freedom, or liberty, but simply to survive." (That's straight from the game's website.)

Enter backup quarterback Josh McCown and the Bears offense. They controlled the game and nabbed a 27-20 win over Green Bay, shaking a six-game losing streak to the Cheeseheads. Sure, it helped that Green Bay quarterback Aaron Rodgers went down with an injury, but with Jay Cutler on the sidelines, don't expect sympathy from the rest of the NFL. So, who earned his stars in the latest rivalry showdown?

CHRIS SOSAIS REDEVE'S SPORTS EDITOR. @REDEVES PORTS CHI

FIRST QUARTER

One star: Gotta say, Josh McCown looked awfully comfortable early on, and his numbers back it up: 7-for-12 passing, 94 yards and a touchdown.

Two stars: Shea McClellin sighting! Not only did he sack Aaron Rodgers on third down to force a Packers field goal, but the Bears lineman knocked Rodgers out of the game with an injury. Tough break, Green Bay.

Three stars: Brandon Marshall had three catches for 54 yards in the quarter. Oh, and a ridiculous TD grab on the side of the end zone. If you missed it, get thee to YouTube.

Score: Packers 10, Bears 7

SECOND QUARTER

One star: Serious pats on the back for the Bears' offensive line. Even when backed up in their own end zone, nobody laid a hand on McCown.

Two stars: They say a running back is a backup QB's best friend. Matt Forte was clutch all quarter, including a 33-yard reception and a 1-yard touchdown run.

Three stars: More of the Josh McCown show. And what a show! Another 102 yards passing and two more scoring drives.

Score: Bears 17, Packers 10

THIRD QUARTER

One star: Warning: green and gold ahead. Tricky Packers coach Mike McCarthy called a surprise onside kick, which his team recovered and later turned into a field goal. Well played, sir.

Two stars: That blur you saw pummeling the Bears defense was Green Bay running back Eddle Lacy. He had 84 yards and a TD in the quarter. Get well soon, Lance Briggs.

Three stars: "Gimme that, sucka!"
That's what we imagine Alshon
Jeffery said when he ripped a TD
catch away from a defender, giving the Bears the lead again.

Score: Bears 24, Packers 20

FOURTH QUARTER

One star: Wait, is that ...? Yes, it's Julius Peppers! Invisible most of the season, he batted down a Seneca Wallace pass on a third-down play and sacked him later in the quarter.

Two stars: Forte (179 total yards), McCown (275 yards passing), Marshall (107 yards receiving)—take your pick. They all were a nightmare for the Packers defense.

Three stars: Marc Trestman gets his first win against Green Bay in his first try. In Lambeau Field. His best call: going for it on fourth-and-inches in his own territory, vaulting the Bears back into first place in the NFC North. Mission accomplished.

Final score: Bears 27, Packers 20

	Now that the Bears have played half of their games	they can probably buy non- refundable vacation tickets for January and February without worrying.	the season is half empty.	we can reasonably delete half our expectations for them.	_ I'm left with only eight Sundays to drink so much that I forget the defense sucks.	_ we have only half the season to suck more than the Vikings.
2	The Kansas City Chiefs are 9-0. How do you explain that?	It's proof that barbecue makes you a better coach. Or that Andy Reid has been replaced by aliens.	The salary cap and injuries make football essentially luck. Oh, not a real answer? Ditka.	They are blessed by the spirit of the great Chief Illiniwek.	You can't. It's stunning. Like Steve-discovering-his-mother- was-a-lesbian-on-"90210" stunning.	Like trying to explain the Bengals being first in the AFC North shocking.
3	What's causing Derrick Rose's shooting and turnover woes?	He's playing against the best players in the world and he's rusty. Simple.	Woes? The sweetest thing.	That dollar store masking tape on the back of his neck.	He's only 110 percent. He clearly needs to be 236 percent before dominating.	There wasn't enough of a break after his injury to recover. "cough"
4	Console former Hawk Dave Bolland as he recovers from leg surgery.	You just won the Stanley Cup. You are rich. Women think you are cute.	Just know in your recovery state, you are still better than John Scott.	Hey, man, half the city didn't even know you played for the Hawks. Love, the South Side.	He just needs one weekend with Kane. After three days, he won't feel pain or remember anything.	At least you get all the new "Housewives" premieres this week while on bed rest!
5	After losing on a Hail Mary, how can Northwestern foot- ball's season get worse?	Two words: butt fumble.	They could wear jerseys with a slang word for "poop" on their backs.	Relax, everybodyl Coach Fitzgerald only has eight years left on his contract. #purplekoolaid	If they decided to overpay an overrated coach for subpar re- sults oh, wait.	They could be Purdue and go for their sixth straight loss

HAIL TO THE CHAMPS

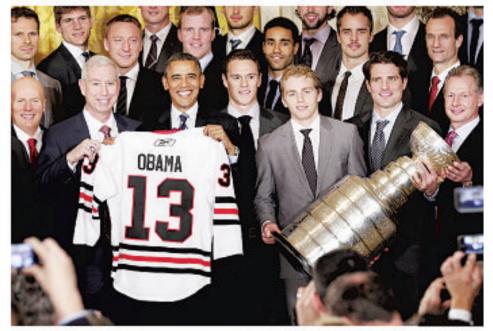

WASHINGTON The final piece of the Blackhawks' celebration of their 2013 Stanley Cup championship was put in place Monday when the team was honored by President Obama at the White House.

"Since I took office we've hosted a lot of championship teams, from Boston, New York, Pittsburgh and Miami, but since I've been president only one team has brought a world championship to my hometown of Chicago, and now the Blackhawks have done it twice," Obama said with a big smile.

The team met with Obama prior to the ceremony in the East Room of the White House. For many, it was their second time meeting the president-they did it in 2011 to celebrate the Hawks' 2010 Stanley Cup.

"It definitely wasn't any less special than last time," Hawks captain Jonathan Toews said. "It's always cool to come back here. There's definitely some Chicago pride here in Washington and it was cool to see that. To be around President Obama again is a pretty special thing."

Obama again congratulated the Hawks on their achievement, and showed that he was familar with an off-color portion of the team's Grant Park celebration when he joked that they orginally had planned to allow goaltender Corey Crawford to speak at the ceremony.

The Hawks also visited the Walter Reed National Military Medical Center before going to the White House.

Northwestern will wear red, white and blue uniforms against Michigan on Nov. 16 to support the Wounded Warrior Project, And instead of names on their jerseys, Northwestern players will have Duty, Honor, Courage, Commitment, Integrity, Country or Service. The words were randomly assigned to players. The blood splatter on the flag might weird some people out, but the show of nationalism will have a tangible benefit. The Under Armour lerseys will be auctioned after the game, with 100 percent of proceeds going to the Wounded Warriors.

That's when "Chelsea Dagger" band The Fratellis will take part in the Shoot the Puck challenge during the Blackhawks game at the United Center, and perform at Metro afterward.

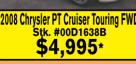

Nice Rose finishes last?

Is Tom Thibodeau upset? One might draw that conclusion from the Bulls coach's comments regarding Derrick Rose's scant trips to the freethrow line this season. "I'll say this: I don't know of anyone who drives as hard as he does. Nor as fast as he does. And I think sometimes he's penalized for being a nice guy. I'll leave it at that."

The royal weak stuff

FAST PAISED

Matt Pais

Before the "Diana" screening I attended, moviegoers could enter to win a spa package to live like a princess for a day. This seems better suited to a Disney princess movie-unless the winner will be mobbed by photographers after her massage.

The questionable judgment lasted another two hours. The princess of Wales (Naomi Watts in a role I'd have wanted for Elizabeth Banks or Alice Eve) was the people's princess, yet "Diana" keeps the people at a distance. It mostly chronicles her relationship with heart surgeon Hasnat Khan (Naveen Andrews of "Lost") in the two years before her death. Really? That's all that matters in this lifetime?

Diana insists, "I want to help people!" but the film doesn't connect her global activism with actual progress. Set from 1995-97, the movie repeatedly reminds us that she's the most famous woman in the world without proving why Adapting Kate Snell's book "Diana: Her Last Love," writer Stephen Jeffreys and director Oliver Hirschbiegel ("Downfall") take far too many details for granted. When

Diana laments

Diana

that her family is "bloody irritating," viewers without clear memories of everything that went down will consider pulling up Wikipedia mid-movie. (Don't.)

I have no idea what's behind Diana's games with certain members of the paparazzi. I believe she was seen as a devoted mother, so it's odd that the only time she is portrayed with her sons, she's saying goodbye. And could her interest in Khan really have led her to yell outside his building and ask him if hearts can literally break?

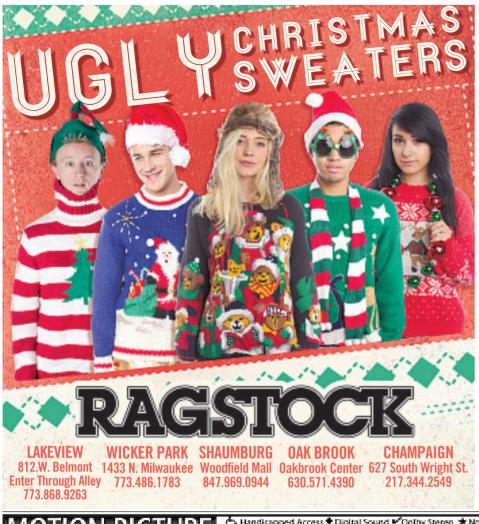

> I gagged when the doctor compares the improvisational nature of jazz to life: "You improvise all the time; if you can improvise, you'll like jazz." Also painful: the phoniness of watching people on-screen listen to music.

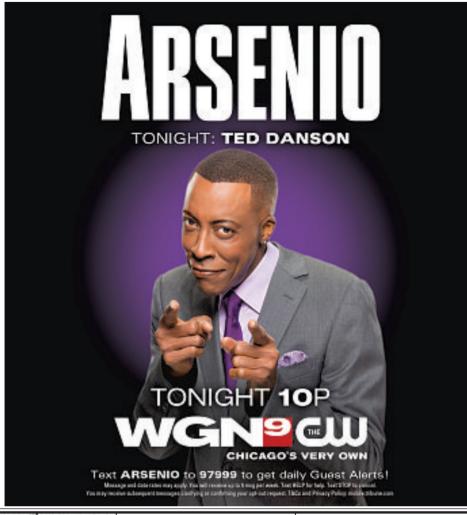

Too close to "Hyde Park on Hudson" on the "Who cares?" scale, the unmemorable "Diana" treats its memorable figure as a > martyr who was a lousy cook and a victim of fame, not a complex humanitarian with an often-difficult personal life. She sheds far more tears over Khan than the sight of kids in Angola whose limbs were blown off by land mines. That's the stuff that matters, not sneaking around in a wig to meet her secret boyfriend at Chicken Cottage. Which does sound delicious, though.

Night Time. My Time Sky Ferreira

By Matt Pals

REDEVE SOUND BOARD I don't know how many artists have appeared naked on their debut album's cover, but it can't be very many. With a facial expression that says either "Why do things have to be so tough?" or "What are you doing in my shower?" Sky

Ferreira's photo for her long-delayed "Night Time, My Time" presents not just physical vulnerability but an emotional openness that many young singers-cough, Selena Gomez-omit from their personality-free material.

The approach matches Ferreira's startling appearance at Pitchfork 2013, during which the 21-year-old singer broke down crying several times, unable to handle the big stage or the attention or another mysterious weight on her shoulders. Recently canceling some shows due to a vocal cord injury and later arrested on drug charges, Ferreira's problems seem to be varied and consistent. I hope she's OK, and not just because "Night Time, My Time" is really good-a thoughtful, composed effort from an artist recognizing her struggles to keep it together.

Admittedly, I don't get "Omanko," in which Ferreira sings about "Japanese Jesus" and "gearing up for a Japanese Christmas." Otherwise, the album is one affecting, wounded pop gem after another, delivered with a voice that tells you the singer feels every word deeply. From "I Blame Myself" (a direct acknowledgment of her public perception) to "Nobody Asked Me (If I Was Okay)" to "You're Not the One," Ferreira is battling inner and outer demons with no clear winner. The music is as catchy as the lyrics are sad or assertive-or both.

There's sweetness and loneliness in "Love in Stereo," and "Boys," on which Ferreira sings, "You put my faith back in boys," may be drunkenly added to college mix CDs by girls with slurred thoughts saying, "I'm not sure if I should be doing this, but what the hell, he deserves to know how I feel." Guitars and keyboards flirting, miscommunicating and compromising, Ferreira's songs have high replay value even if you're not at a place where lines like "You make my heavy metal heart beat" will register.

If you are, watch out. Your emotions have a voice in an artist who's not able to contain her passion and exhaustion either. In concert: Nov. 23 at Vic Theatre.

KEEPING YOU PLUGGED IN TO TODAY'S MOST BUZZWORTHY MUSIC

Eminem

By Ernest Wilkins

REDEVE SOUND BOARD Eminem is one of the best rappers ever. That fact cannot be disputed.

Yet "The Marshall Mathers LP 2," the sequel to Em's 2000 smash, is a frustrating record. Though Slim Shady hasn't lost a step technically, the bawdy, "shock you for the sake of doing it" style hasn't aged well. We're supposed to sit here and accept lazy jabs at whoever happened to be in the issue of Us Weekly—and Monica Lewinsky, whom Eminem's still joking about for some reason—that was in the studio that day? Give me a damn break.

I'm looking forward to the people who usually decry homophobic and misogynistic lyrics tearing their hamstrings running to throw platitudes on this album. The lack of outrage already is maddening, especially given the welcome lip service toward tolerance in a post-Macklemore world.

The biggest narrative of "MMLP2" is that now that Eminem isn't in the mainstream spotlight as much anymore, he can wrap himself in the comfort of the music that inspired him. The '80s are all over this record, from nods to one-hit wonders J.J. Fad to production from Rick Rubin. Em's a testament to the days when sheer ability was enough to get you noticed, but for better or for worse, those days are gone. Besides, the album contains a frustrating amount of blatantly pandering anthems ("Legacy," The Monster" and "Berzerk") that sound like a studio exec is telling the rapper, "Think about the college football highlight packages!" The obvious "Love Game" (featuring Kendrick Lamar) was a novel attempt but ends up sounding like, well ... Eminem and Kendrick Lamar releasing a doo-woo single. It's awkward. Very awkward.

I don't hate Eminem. I'm happy to have him back. I just wish I got the evolved version of the icon I grew up with instead of a guy trying to pull off the same shocking material I used to absorb while watching WWF in 1999. I'm also angry because this is what the music industry thinks I want. We're expected to put up with average content because the artist gave us something amazing once. We whine about aging rockers showing off their skills by noodling endlessly and expecting to be heralded. We scoff at lyrically dexterous "backpack" rappers spitting rapid-fire rhymes, put our noses in the air and claim "rapping for the sake of rapping" isn't enough to set them apart. So why is Eminem getting a pass to be mediocre? Because he made "Stan?" "The Marshall Mathers LP" was a man from the poorest upbringing opening fire on the establishment and the hypocrisy within it. His last album, "Recovery," saw him coming to terms with getting clean after years of addiction. This? This is the Rolling Stones doing uninspired tours for rich people. This is the most frustrating parts of "Magna Carta Holy Grail." This is realizing the men who inspired you to do great things are just human beings who like money. It sucks. A lot.

GETTING A SNEAK PEEK AT RON BURGUNDY DOESN'T COME CHEAP, YOU KNOW

By Dana Moran | REDEYE

If you're really, hopelessly, disgustingly obsessed with seeing "Anchorman 2," listen up: You can pay for the chance to see it two days early. But it's gonna cost you. The studio's last superticket, for "World War Z," cost $50, and that movie looked way crappier. Here's what you'd have to give us to pony up that kind of cash ... and more.
